A New Era of Highway Safety

Monday, December 5, 2016 | 12:00 p.m. – 1:30 p.m.

Rayburn House Office Building, Room 2322 | Washington, D.C.

Lunch will be served.

According to research performed by NHTSA, traffic deaths are increasing at the fastest rate in 50 years. In addition, non-fatal accidents are on the rise, too. In the future, self-driving cars may reduce the number of accidents and deaths. At the present, experts in the field know that there are measures that we can take now to reduce accidents even as important public policy discussions are held on automated vehicles.
